Africatown hopes to spark an honest conversation between the African and African-American communities through the screening of Bound: African vs African American at Langston Hughes on Saturday.

Africatown is looking to the screening of the movie Bound: Africans vs African Americans on Saturday, March 9, 2019 at Langston Hughes as an opportunity restart the dialogue between Africans and African-Americans in the Seattle - King County area.

For this to happen though, first we need the cooperation and participation of as many African communities in the area as possible and as well as many as possible African-Americans to come out and be a part of this history making event; shifting the landscape of the Black Community in Seattle forever and opening a honest, open, and productive discussion between the community members. We feel that the film Bound offers a perfect platform in regards to insights around different community perspectives as well as a catalyst for discussion.

Following the film there will be group discussions focusing on solutions and there will be a reception with food from local African and African American restaurants as well.

Informal dress code is African themed if you are able, we would love to take a picture to share our history making event.
